Roosevelt University was founded in 1945 with the belief that all students who are academically qualified should have the right to a university education. Today, that legacy of difference is alive and well in the 6,100 students who come from all parts of the world to study everything from actuarial science to Shakespeare. Roosevelt is a private, nonsectarian university in the heart of Chicago, one of the world’s most vibrant cities. Despite the metropolitan setting, the community is an intimate one, with world-class professors teaching small classes and collaborating closely with students. A Roosevelt education emphasizes academic rigor, real-world relevance and public service.

Chicago College of Performing Arts

One of Roosevelt University’s six colleges, the prestigious Chicago College of Performing Arts (CCPA) provides professional conservatory training in acting, musical theatre, music performance, music composition and music education in two divisions: the Theatre Conservatory and the Music Conservatory. More than 500 students come from all over the world to study at CCPA.

The faculty consists primarily of professional actors, directors and musicians. It includes nearly 30 members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and the Lyric Opera of Chicago orchestra, and theatre performers with extensive credits from Broadway to Chicago to the West Coast.

CCPA got its start as the Chicago Academy of Music (later renamed the Chicago Musical College) in 1867, when it was founded by Florenz Ziegfeld, Sr. It was just the fifth conservatory to be founded in the United States.

The Chicago Musical College merged with a then-9-years-old Roosevelt College in 1954. In 2000, it was renamed the Chicago College of Performing Arts in recognition of the shared strength of its creative disciplines and the world-class city it calls home.

The Theatre Conservatory is immersed in history. Our home is the landmark Auditorium Building, built in 1889 by famed architects Adler and Sullivan, with help from a young Frank Lloyd Wright. Inside the Auditorium Building, the 210-seat Patrick O’Malley Theatre has served as the main stage performance space for decades of students.

Ten years after the Auditorium Building was constructed, the McClurg Building (also a National Historic Landmark) was built just up the street; today it holds our dance and camera studios.

Each class writes its own story and passes the CCPA tradition from year to year. Once again our freshmen will begin their journey and our senior class will become part of our living history as they make their entrance into the professional world.

Our 2015-16 season celebrates 10 decades of very colorful history. We commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Easter Rising with the Irish drama The Plough and the Stars. Our performance of The 39 Steps comes 101 years after the book was written, made famous a few years later by Hitchcock’s 1935 film. Hair will remind us just how much has changed since the sexual revolution of the ‘60s. Much has changed, also, since The Baker’s Wife first toured 40 years ago. We will remember those lost to the AIDS epidemic in Elegies for Angels, Punks and Raging Queens. We’ll get nostalgic for ‘90s pop culture with She Kills Monsters, and Legally Blonde will bring us into the new millennium.

This journey through history will guide our young actors into their futures, following in the footsteps of CCPA alumni working on Broadway, all over Chicagoland stages and in film. Join me and our talented artists-in-training as we celebrate the past and turn brightly to the future.
